Research and scholarly publications play a critical role in higher education faculty members' professional career; especially when a faculty member goes up for tenure. The current policy for allowing authors to submit their manuscript to only one journal at a time coupled with annually reviewing faculty members for retention calls for more discussion. The topics for this round table discussion will be focused on: (a) junior and senior faculty members obtaining publications in a timely manner, (b) journal types and how to select the best-fit journal for your work, (c) steps and ways to write a manuscript per journal instructions, (d) strategies on how to revise a manuscript according to reviewer comments and suggestions, and (e) other tips and strategies from experienced faculty. It is hoped that with this round table discussion we can further support attendees with their research publication abilities.
